11. 'Madam Rides the Bus' is a story written by Vallikkannan about an eight - year old curious girl named Valli who wanted to enjoy a bus ride. After careful planning and saving enough money for the bus fare she finally got to enjoy her first excursion trip to town in a bus.

On the return journey, Valli was watching beautiful scene outside the window. Suddenly she saw a dead cow by the roadside struck by a fast moving vehicle. She asked the conductor if it was the same cow they encountered before. The conductor agreed. Valli became sad. Just a while ago it was a lovely creature and now it looked horrible and frightening soaked in blood. The bus moved on but Valli could not. She could not enjoy the beautiful view outside as the memory of the dead cow haunted her. She sat quietly through the rest of her journey.

12. 'Diary of Anne Frank' is an excerpt / extract taken from Anne Frank's diary. She has described the incident when she was assigned an essay as punishment for talking in class by her Maths teacher Mr. Keesing.

No, Anne Frank was not right when she said that the world would not be interested in the thoughts of a thirteen-year-old girl. Her diary, which she wrote while hiding from the Nazis during World War II, became very famous. It was published as "The Diary of a Young Girl" and has been read by millions of people around the world. Her words have touched many hearts and taught people about the horrors of war and the importance of hope and resilience.

13. 'The Sermon at Benares' is a story written by Betty Renshaw. In this lesson she has described how prince Siddhartha got enlightenment and how he made Kisa Gotami realise the ultimate truth that death is inevitable for mortals.

Kisa Gotami speaks with Buddha and wandered from house to house. She asks people to provide mustard seeds. But according to Buddha's condition the mustard seeds were to be taken from the house where no relative or friend had died. She failed to find such house as all humans are subject to death.

14. Glimpses of India contains three different stories from three different parts of India. They represent three fresh fragrances we all love on our breakfast table every morning : bread, coffee and tea. The first story 'A Baker from India' written by Lucio Rodrigues is a pen - portrait of a traditional Goan village baker who still has an important place in his society.

Bread was very popular in good old Portuguese days. Even after so many years it is still popular and an essential thing for Goan people. Marriage gifts in Goa are meaningless without the sweet bread known as the bol. In the same way a party or a feast loses its charm without bread. The lady of the house must prepare sandwiches on the occasion of her daughter's engagement. Cakes and bolinhas are a must for Christmas and other festivals.

Thus, bread is an important part of Goan life.

15. 'The Black Aeroplane' written by Fredrick Forsyth is a mysterious story about a pilot's miraculous rescue from huge storm clouds. It shows us that there are still some supernatural phenomena ( mysterious events ) in this world we can't explain or understand.

The narrator decided to take the risk and flew his old Dakota right through the storm. It was a decision he regretted as soon he entered the huge black clouds. Everything around was dark. It was impossible to see anything outside. The old plane jumped and shook violently in the air. The compass and other instrument became dead. He tried to contact Paris Control room but even the radio was dead. Thus, he found himself stuck in a deadly situation.

SECTION-B

16. The boy is learning the epistemology of loss.
17. Every man knows how to stand up one day.
18. John Berryman is the poet of this poem.
19. (D)
20. (A)
21. 'For Anne Gregory' is a beautiful poem written by William Butler Yeats. In this poem, the poet is having a conversation with a beautiful girl named Anne Gregory on the topic of true love.

The young woman has beautiful golden hair. She looks so beautiful with her golden hair that anyone may fall in love with her. But she does not like that type of love as it is not love at all. It is merely an attraction. She says she can change the colour of her hair to brown, black or orange.

22. 'The tale of Custard the Dragon' is a hilarious poem written by Ogden Nash. It is about a girl named Belinda and her pets. It mocks at those people who boast about their strength but flee when it comes time to face the danger.

Custard is Belinda's pet. He was a dragon. Though he was a huge and dangerous creature ( animal ), he cried for a nice safe cage. He did so because he was coward and he felt unsafe in open space. So he asked Belinda for a nice safe cage where he could stay and rest peacefully.

23. 'A Tiger in the Zoo' is a poem written by Leslie Norris highlighting the pain, anguish and helplessness of a caged animal. In this poem, he has beautifully described the contrast between a caged animal and a free animal in its natural habitat.

When the tiger is in his natural habitat - jungle, he roams freely. He lurks behind long grass ambushing his favourite prey - plump deer. He sometimes goes to the villages situated at the edge of the jungle and roars loudly terrorising the villagers to death.

24. 'Fire and Ice' is a beautiful short poem written by Robert Frost. In this poem he has presented an imaginary debate between two groups of people on how the world would end.

There are two strong possibilities regarding the end of the world. Some people believe that the world will end in fire. Fire means volcanic eruption, collision of a comet or nuclear bomb blast. Here 'fire' symbolises uncontrolled passion and desire. While some people think that the world will end in ice. Ice means return of ice age or nuclear winter after a nuclear war. Here, 'ice' symbolises hatred and grudge.

25. 'The Trees' is a beautiful poem written by Adrienne Rich. In this poem she is talking about tree moving out from our house into forest. It has deeper meaning as the tree depicts women and forest means outside world.

In Adrienne Rich's poem "The Trees," the branches of the trees are compared to newly discharged patients who are moving out of a clinic. This comparison highlights the struggle and effort of the branches as they try to free themselves from the confines of the house, much like patients who are still weak and recovering yet they leave the hospital.

26. The safe was hidden behind a rather poor painting.
27. Collecting books were better than collecting paintings because paintings took up too much room.
28. Horace felt his nose tickle because of flowers. He gave a little sneeze due to its allergic reaction.

Dear Diary,

Today mom and I visited the Sunshine Orphanage, a place filled with little hearts waiting for love and care. We carried a bag of old storybooks and clothes - things that had been gathering dust in our home. As we entered the orphanage, the children's eyes sparkled. Their smiles were like sunshine breaking through clouds. The caretaker, Mr. Kapoor, welcomed us warmly. He introduced us to the kids - little toddlers, curious school-goers, and shy teenagers.

We spread out the storybooks on a colourful mat. The children gathered around, their eyes wide with wonder. I watched as they flipped through the pages, lost in magical worlds. Next came the clothes. We sorted them by size – tiny shirts, dresses, and little socks. The kids tried them on, twirling and laughing. A little girl named Priya hugged me tightly. Her eyes held a mix of gratitude and hope. She thanked us for the pretty dress. I got emotional. It was a regular dress, yet it meant so much to her. The boys were equally thrilled. Ravi a young teenager, proudly wore a superhero T-shirt. As we left, the children waved goodbye. Their laughter echoed in my ears. I knew we had done something special. It wasn't just about books and clothes ; it was about connecting hearts.

Back home, I sat by my window, watching the sunset. The warmth I was feeling wasn't from the sun; it was from the joy of giving. It really was a unforgettable experience for me.

School Report Team - X ( B )

16th September, 2024.

Our school organized an exciting trip to Rani ki Vav, also known as the Queen's Stepwell, located in Patan, Gujarat. Rani ki Vav is a UNESCO World Heritage Site and a true marvel of ancient Indian architecture. The stepwell is beautifully designed with seven levels and more than 800 elaborate sculptures.

Our school had hired a professional guide to provide us information about the Vaav. He informed us that Rani ki Vav was built during the 11th century AD by Queen Udayamati, in memory of her husband, King Bhimdev I. It was built to solve the problem of scarcity of water faced by local people. As we went deeper and deeper in the step well, we were mesmerised by beautiful sculptures on the walls, pillars and galleries. The most beautiful sculptures was of 'Mahisasurmardini'. We took many photos of beautiful sculptures and carvings. We also took a group photo with our teachers.

What a memorable visit it was ! OR It was not just an excursion trip ; it was a journey through time ! I request all of you to visit this beautiful place at least once.

Subject : Nuisance of stray cattle in our area

Dear Sir,

I would like to draw your attention to a very serious matter in our area, Pragatinagar. As you know, our area is one of the most developed area of the city. But thanks to nuisance of stray cattle, it is now compared to a backward village. We are facing this difficulty for the last six months. Stray animals like cows, bulls and dogs pose a serious threat to public safety. They roam freely on the roads and streets. Sometimes they sit in the middle of the road and become a common cause of accidents. They hurt innocent children and senior citizens. Last week, a woman and a man in our area lost their lives due to fatal attack by cows.

I, therefore, request you on behalf of all the locality of our area to do the needful in this matter. I'm sure that you will take this matter seriously and solve our problem.

Yours faithfully,
Janvi Dabhi

57. Essay (A) Recollection of you childhood

Childhood is a treasure of memories, filled with joy, innocence, and endless adventures. It is a time when the world seems magical, and every day is a new opportunity to explore and learn. My childhood was no different, and I cherish those moments even today. My family played a crucial role in my childhood. My parents, grandparents, and siblings were my world. The love and care they showered upon me created a strong emotional bond that still holds us together. I remember the warm hugs from my mother, the playful teasing from my father, and the bedtime stories from my grandparents. These moments made me feel secure and loved.

One of the most memorable incidents from my childhood was my first day at school. I was nervous and excited at the same time. My mother held my hand and walked me to the classroom. I remember crying a little when she left, but soon I made new friends and forgot all about my fears. Another unforgettable moment was when I learned to ride a bicycle. My father patiently taught me, and the day I finally managed to ride without falling was a day of great triumph. Childhood was synonymous with playfulness. Whether it was playing hide and seek with my friends, building sandcastles at the beach, or simply running around in the park, every activity was filled with laughter and joy. The carefree days of playing from morning till dusk are some of the best memories I have.

No childhood is complete without a bit of mischief. I was no exception. I remember sneaking into the kitchen to steal cookies, drawing on the walls with crayons, and playing pranks on my siblings. These mischievous acts often got me into trouble, but they also added a lot of fun to my childhood.

Looking back, my childhood was a beautiful blend of love, joy, and learning. The emotional attachment with my family, the memorable incidents, the playfulness, and the mischiefs all contributed to making it a time I will always cherish. These memories are a reminder of the simple pleasures of life and the importance of family and love.

57. Essay (B) Tuition in Education - Necessity or Nuisance

Tuition classes have become a common part of the educational journey for many students. While some see them as essential for academic success, others view them as an unnecessary burden. Let's explore the advantages and disadvantages of tuition classes and discuss whether they help or harm education.

Advantages : First let's take a look at some of the advantages of tuition classes :

One of the main advantages of tuition classes is the personalized attention students receive. In a regular classroom, teachers often have to manage many students, making it difficult to address individual needs. Tuition classes, with their smaller groups, allow for more focused teaching and tailored support. Another benefit is the extra practice and clarification of concepts. Tuition classes provide additional time to go over difficult topics, ensuring students understand the material thoroughly. This can be especially helpful during exam preparation, as it boosts confidence and performance.

Disadvantages : Now let's take a look at disadvantages of tuition classes :

However, there are also several disadvantages to consider. One major issue is the financial burden on families. Tuition classes can be expensive, and not all families can afford them, leading to inequality in educational opportunities. Additionally, tuition classes can lead to overburdening students. With school, homework, and extra classes, students may have little time left for rest and recreation. This can result in stress and burnout, negatively impacting their overall well-being.

Do Tuitions Help or Harm Education?

The impact of tuition classes on education can be both positive and negative. On one hand, they can provide valuable support and help students achieve better academic results. On the other hand, they can create dependency, where students rely on tuition rather than developing independent study skills. Moreover, the pressure to attend tuition classes can sometimes overshadow the importance of regular school education. This can lead to a situation where students focus more on tuition than on participating in school activities and learning experiences.

In conclusion, tuition classes can be both a necessity and a nuisance. They offer personalized attention and extra practice, which can be beneficial for students. However, they also come with financial costs and the risk of overburdening students. Whether tuition helps or harms education depends on how it is used. It is important to find a balance that supports learning without causing undue stress or dependency.

57. Story

Once upon a time in England, a curious jackal wandered into a dyer's workshop one day. While exploring, he accidentally fell into a tub of blue dye. When he climbed out, he was completely blue! Seeing his new appearance, the jackal had an idea. He decided to announce himself as the king of the animals.

The other animals, amazed by his unusual colour, believed he was a special creature and began to respect him. The jackal enjoyed his new status and started to insult the other animals, thinking they would never discover his true identity. One night, the jackal heard a group of jackals howling in the distance. Unable to resist, he joined in and howled loudly. The other animals immediately recognized the sound and realized that their "king" was just an ordinary jackal.

Furious at being deceived, the animals turned on the jackal. They chased him and, in their anger, killed him. The jackal's clever plan had backfired, and he paid the ultimate price for his deceit. This story teaches us that dishonesty and arrogance can lead to one's downfall.
