(B) Conservatism is a political philosophy that stressed the importance of tradition, established institutions and customs and preferred gradual development to quick change. European Governments were driven by Conservatism, after the defeat of Napoleon in 1815. Conservatives were people who believed that established, traditional institutions of state and society - like the monarchy church, social hierarchies, property and the family should be preserved. Most conservatives did not want to return to the society of pre-revolutionary days because they had realised the changes initiated by Napoleon strengthened the traditional institutions like the monarchy. Monarchies that had been overthrown by Napoleon were restored to power to create a new conservative order in Europe. Conservative regimes set up in 1815 were autocratic. A modern army, an efficient bureaucracy, a dynamic economy, the abolition of feudalism and serfdom could strengthen the autocratic monarchies in Europe. Thus, the conservatives of that time accepted the changes which were in favour of their interests.

31. (A) It is true that politics and social divisions should not be allowed to mix. It leads to negative results. We can see this when caste starts influencing politics:

- (i) Each caste group tries to become bigger by incorporating within it neighbouring castes or subcastes which it had excluded earlier.
- (ii) New kinds of caste groups like backward and forward have emerged. This is not healthy for democracy and can lead to tensions, conflicts and even violence. It diverts attention from other pressing issues like poverty, development and corruption.
- (iii) Political parties and candidates in elections make appeals to caste sentiment to muster support. Some political parties are known to favour some castes and are seen as their representatives. This is bad, because it gives the impression that elections are about caste and nothing else. This is far from truth.

OR

(B) The caste system is influenced by the politics and so it can take following forms in politics:

- (i) When political parties choose candidates, they keep in mind the caste composition of the voters and so, candidates are chosen on the basis of their caste many times.
- (ii) In many places, voters vote on the basis of caste and fail to choose suitable candidates.
- (iii) When a government is formed after the elections, political parties take care that different castes are represented in the government.
- (iv) Political parties appeal to caste sentiments during elections.
- (v) To gain support, political parties, raise caste- based issues during elections.
- (vi) The castes considered inferior or low until now have been made aware of their rights by the political parties.

32. (A)

S. No.	Khadar	Bangar
(i)	New Alluvial	Old Alluvial
(ii)	More fine particles and more fertile	High concentration of kanker nodules
(iii)	Continuous renewal	No continuous renewal

OR

(B) Resources are vital for human survival and their indiscriminate use lead to the following problems:

- (i) To satisfy the greed of few individuals, depletion of resources has continued.
- (ii) Due to the accumulation of resources in few hands, the society gets divided into two segments, i.e., rich and poor.

(iii) Indiscriminate use of resources has led to ecological crisis, e.g., ozone layer depletion, land degradation, global warming and environmental pollution.

33. (A) This statement is true due to following reasons:

(i) As the resources are always limited, international trade provides the opportunity for its best use.

(ii) Goods or resources of one country are required by other and vice-versa. These differences create conditions for international trade.

(iii) Foreign investment and trade has helped India to improve its productivity of manufactured goods. International trade contributes to India's economic growth, raising income level of people. As more people in the world come to know about India; it stimulates tourism and opens the door for business and earning of foreign exchange.

(iv) In the recent years, exchange of commodities and goods have been superseded by the exchange of services associated with information technology adding large sums to the foreign exchange reserves.

(v) India has emerged as a large data processing giant at the international level and it is earning large foreign exchange through the export of information technology. Thus, it can be concluded that advancement of international trade of a country is an index of its economic prosperity.

OR

(B) Globalisation means integrating the economy of a country with the economies of other countries under conditions of free flow of trade, capital and movement of persons across borders. For a long time foreign trade has been the main channel connecting different countries. Integration of markets occur through foreign trade, when goods from the market of one country travels to the market of another country, thus connecting them. Since earlier times, foreign trade has been connecting the different countries. Early trade routes helped in connecting Asia to the rest of the world. These trade routes not only facilitated the movement of goods, but also the movement of people and ideas. Later on, trading interests attracted various trading companies such as the East India Company got attracted towards India. Thus, foreign trade creates opportunities for producers to reach beyond the domestic markets and compete in markets located in other countries of the world. Similarly, the buyers have more choices of goods, beyond domestically produced goods. With the opening of trade, goods travel from one market to another and choices of goods in the markets rises. Prices of similar goods in the two markets tend to become equal. And, producers in the two countries compete against each other even though they are separated by thousands of miles. Thus, foreign trade results in connecting the markets or integration of markets in different countries.
