SECTION – A
READING SKILLS (20 MARKS)

1. Read the following text.

(10 m)

(1) India has stood for freedom: Even before Independence we viewed our own struggle and difficulties on the larger canvas of global problems. If democracy is basically tolerance for others' opinions, the concept of coexistence is democracy on the international plane, for it embodies tolerance of other nations and systems.

Similarly non-alignment gives depth to our independence and self-reliance for it enables us to retain our freedom of judgement and action on international issues in the light of our national interests. We avoid involvement in the conflicts and disputes of others and this helps to blunt conflict between power blocs. I should like to think that it has also helped world stability.

(2) A country is an extended family. When income and resources are limited, one must budget to ensure that waste is avoided, resources husbanded, priorities established, education and other social needs catered to, special provision made for those who are weaker or smaller. Industry has to be balanced with agriculture; technology with culture; state ventures with private initiative; economic growth with social justice; the large with the small. Every section of society must be stimulated to creative activity.

(3) That is our planning. In no way is it totalitarian or coercive. Industrializing, modernizing and transforming an ancient society of immense size, population and diversity is a daunting venture and inevitably, a gradual one. Otherwise, there will be resentment. Transformation should not cause too much dislocation or suffering for the people nor should it jettison the basic spiritual and cultural values of our civilization.

(4) India's planning experience sums up the successes and problems of our democratic development. The magnitude and significance of democracy's operation in India are not well understood, for it is often treated as an adventitious or borrowed growth. Why has democracy worked in India? Our national leadership was dedicated to it and we wanted it to work, but, also, because in our society there were elements and traditions which supported the growth of democracy.

(5) In our democratic system, there may be differences in many spheres but we rise above them. To achieve the objective of keeping the country united, we have to transcend political and party-based differences, which create dissensions. If we cannot remain united and the country does not remain strong, with whom shall we have differences? Against whom shall we fight? With whom shall we be friends? Brothers and sisters, if the country falls, nobody survives. When we were fighting for the freedom of our country, it did not mean only political freedom. It also meant social justice, equality and economic justice. Only one phase is over and another one is under way. We have to cover a long and difficult path. Whereas the enemies were visible during those days; now they are in disguise. Some of them are openly our enemies, but many become unintentional pawns of others.

Answer the following questions, based on the passage.

i. Why has democracy worked in India? Justify your answer in about 40 words.

ii. "Similarly non-alignment gives depth to our independence and self-reliance". Here the word non-alignment means _____ . (1)

- 2. Initiative - Inactivity
- 3. Resentment - Irritation
- 4. Dissensions - Agreements
- 5. Totalitarian - Monolithic

- | | |
|--------------|--------------|
| A. 1. and 5. | B. 2. and 3. |
| C. 3. and 4. | D. 3. and 5. |

vii. Which of these statements is false? (1)

- A. Non-alignment enables us to retain our freedom of judgement and action on international issues.
- B. The magnitude and significance of democracy's operation in India are not well understood.
- C. Transformation should jettison the basic spiritual and cultural values of our civilization.
- D. To achieve the objective of keeping the country united, we have to transcend political and party-based differences.

viii. Complete the sentence appropriately. (1)

According to the author, freedom for the country means _____.

2. Read the following text. (10)

(1) The number of children and teens that are overweight or obese has more than tripled between the years of 1980 and 2004. While obesity is not restricted by gender, ethnicity or socio-economic status, there is a slightly increased risk for those who are from poorer families. Girls are more likely to be overweight than boys, and Hispanic and African American teens are slightly more likely to be obese than other races.

(2) Younger people, especially teens who are obese, face multiple problems caused by their weight. First, they face the same health problems that an overweight adult would, including cardiovascular disease, diabetes, kidney disease, hypertension and cancer. Second, they face developmental troubles because of their weight and their health, especially if they are unable to go to school on a regular basis. And finally, they also face social development problems as they struggle to develop their personality while facing peer pressures beyond what the average child is facing.

(3) Children and teens become obese for a variety of reasons: they tend to eat a poorly balanced diet filled with fast foods and very limited fruits and vegetables. One study showed that girls and boys ages 10 to 15 admitted that French fries were the only vegetable that they consumed on a regular basis. Another study showed that girls would eat other vegetables but only if they were covered in a cheese sauce.

(4) In addition to poor food choices, they tend to be very sedentary, most of them spending most of their time in front of a television or computer screen or texting and talking on their cell phones. Finally, the children in the study that were found to be the most overweight also had overweight parents, suggesting not only a genetic link to explain their weight but an atmospheric one as well. After all, children of smokers tend to be smokers themselves, so it would stand to reason that obese parents typically will produce obese children.

(5) The problem with weight and young teens, especially girls, is the fact that dieting and weight loss programs tend to backfire. In a three-year study that monitored boys and girls, ages 9 to 14, the dieters ultimately gained more weight than those who did not diet at all. It is necessary to use a different approach when dealing with young children and teens who are overweight. First, the family must be in total agreement that there is a problem. Several school districts came under fire in recent years when they sent home letters regarding a child's weight and the health risks. The parents were either unaware that their child could develop such "adult" health problems as Type II diabetes or heart disease, or they did not accept that the child was anything but "stocky" or "husky". Rather than face the legal ramifications, the school districts stopped informing the parents, hoping that the child's doctor would take on the battle instead.

(6) It is normal for a girl to increase her body fat during puberty; it is simply the way that the female body works. At this time, it is common for the girls to start paying more attention to their physical appearance, with many of them developing eating disorders because they are unhappy with what they see. It should also be noted that these girls are more likely to develop depression, which may also increase their chance of gaining even more weight.

(7) Boys start adding more muscle and also increase in height, leading them to feel more satisfied with their bodies, while young girls are getting increasingly more upset by what they see in the mirror. By the age of 15, over half of the girls in 16 countries are dieting. The United States is the country that has the most weight-obsessed girls, with 47% of girls aged 11, dieting and 62% of 15-year-olds doing so. Ethnicity plays a role in how the girls feel about their bodies, with African American girls feeling more body satisfaction than Caucasian girls of the same age group.

Answer the following questions, based on the passage.

Subject : Nuisance caused by loudspeakers in the city during examination days

Respected Sir,

Through the columns of your esteemed newspaper I would like to draw the attention of the authorities concerned to the nuisance caused by the indiscriminate use of loudspeakers at religious places, wedding processions, market places and jagrans during the examination days. Students are unable to concentrate on the heavy backlog of revision work during these days. The result is that they fare badly in the examinations and this leads to frustration and unhappiness among students. Their parents also suffer due to it. It is high time the concerned authorities take a serious note of this nuisance and initiate remedial measures to keep the problem in check. Use of loudspeakers should be totally banned irrespective of the place where these are used. It is not only a cause of nuisance but also adds to the noise pollution.

Thank you

5. A. The graph shows the number of boys and girls who pursued different hobbies in USA. As shown in the chart, gardening is the most favorite pastime among girls and the least favourite among boys with levels of over 65 and less than 30 respectively. For all other amusements, singing, painting and cycling are very popular among both the genders. As per the given chart the number of boys preferring cycling and girls doing gardening is almost equal. Most boys like to do cycling with around 65 compared to 55 girls.

Girls also like to do painting with levels of around 60, on the contrary only 40 boys like to do painting in their leisure time. There is a difference of about 20 between boys and girls showing interest in reading books. Around 50 girls like to read books in their free time whereas, only 30 boys in comparison to girls showed their interest in it. On the other hand, other than cycling, boys are more interested in singing, where almost 55 boys are there numbering 10 more than girls.

Overall, the figures demonstrate that girls significantly love to spend most of their leisure time on gardening and painting, and after that time on cycling and reading books, and the least they want to spend on singing. However, boys preferred cycling the most, then singing and painting but significantly the least they preferred to do is gardening.

5. B. Our mental health encompasses our psychological, emotional and social well-being. This means it impacts how we feel, think and behave each day. Our mental health also contributes to our decision-making process, how we cope with stress and how we relate to others in our lives.

There is a great misconception for the mentally ill. Many think these people are lazy or just making it up.

There is also the attitude that these people are either crazy, possessed by demons, violent, out of control and unsafe. These are negative labels that have been attached due to the lack of awareness. Raising awareness can reduce misconceptions. Emotional and mental health is important because it's a vital part of your life and impacts your thoughts, behaviors and emotions.

Being healthy emotionally can promote productivity and effectiveness in activities like work, school or care-giving. It plays an important part in the health of your relationships, and allows you to adapt to changes in your life and cope with adversity.

Often mental health is disregarded as mood swings and many people consider having mental/psychological troubles as a sign of weakness. Reaching out and opening up to other people in your life can help provide emotional support. Depression is real and has many physical and psychological manifestations. Thus, the topic mental health should be normalised and taking medical and appropriate help shouldn't be frowned upon.

9 i. Mrs. Hall found the scientist eccentric because of his strange appearance and also, when she tried to be friendly with him, he told her sternly that he did not want to be disturbed and he had come there for solitude and wanted to concentrate on his research. He also told her that an accident had affected his face which is why it is covered in bandages.

ii. Hari Singh was a con who changed his name every month to avoid police. The young thief would change his name and easily escape from police and his former employees too. He introduces himself as Hari Singh to Anil but it is most definitely supposed to be a fake name.

iii. Bholi's teacher treated her with love and compassion, and encouraged her to read and study. She inspired Bholi to become a teacher herself. Education helped Bholi gain her self-confidence. She became aware of self-respect and bravely enough, refused to marry the aged, mean, greedy and cowardly Bishamber Nath.

10. A. It is a fact that parents play a crucial role in the upbringing of their children. Parents influence their children both indirectly and explicitly. They are the role models, first teachers, friends, companions and guides. If we see the example of Richard H. Ebright; his mother was loving, caring, understanding, a friend and a true companion. She played an important role in making him a successful scientist. She not only encouraged him but also bought him scientific equipment. She invested her time and energy in his upbringing which made him see heights of success. On the other hand, Bholi's parents were uncaring, indifferent, biased, insensitive and having a narrow mindset. They had a traditional outlook; due to this they didn't believe in the education of girls, they neglected Bholi and her needs. Despite their prosperity, they left Bholi to her own misery. The contribution and companionship of parents cannot be denied. Love, care, and guidance from parents makes a difference, sculpts children and shapes their future.

B. Lomov and Natalya meet for a serious purpose, i.e., to talk about marriage that decides the progress of one's life as a member of the conventionally established society. But the purpose of their meeting gets lost on two consecutive occasions because Lomov's faith in the values of his society disrupts his approach to the topic of marriage. He learns that the girl and her father like him, but, instead of proposing to marry her and discussing how their marriage should be organised, he goes on to talk about properties, relations, family histories, and pets, draws them into an unnecessary argument, and antagonises both of them. Finally, Chubukov marries Lomov and Natalya by force before another problem crops up. Thus, the play ends on a comic note, just because the couple gets together with their father to celebrate their marriage while the dispute over the pets is still continuing. For any healthy relationship, there should be mutual understanding and respect. Quarreling over trivial issues like dog cannot guarantee longevity of a relationship.

11. A. Life is a great misery. For every individual this mystery of life comes wrapped in a unique package. For some it is all riches, comfort, name and fame. For some, it is nothing but sheer hunger, poverty, anguish and an everyday quest for bare survival. One however, must learn to live within one's means and be content with what one has. Aspirations have no limits but one should never forget the ground realities. One may try to improve his lot by honest means and be content with what one has. One may try to improve his lot by honest means but eventually must be at peace with what one manages to have. 'The Necklace' reveals that vanity is an evil. It may bring joy for a short period but ultimately it leads to ruin.

B. The narrator, a veterinary surgeon, is a capable, compassionate and wise doctor. He handles Tricki properly which shows that he is sincere about his profession. He does not operate upon the dog unnecessarily and cures him by altering his diet and activities. He is a tactful person as he knew exactly how to convince Mrs. Pumphrey to hospitalise Tricki for a surgery. He understands and sympathizes with Mrs. Pumphrey's mental state regarding Tricki's health therefore, to ease her suffering, Mr. Herriot lets her know that Tricki is recuperating. His decision to inform Mrs. Pumphrey to collect Tricki supports his sensibilities even though he was tempted to keep Tricki as a permanent guest. These are some of the values that each of us can inculcate in ourselves. Also, Mr. Herriot was in a profession, which he liked, therefore, he cared about his work and his patients. We too must pursue that field of work, which we deeply love and care about.
