Answer:

Sherlock Holmes is a fictional private detective, the first scientific detective, created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. He is a 'consulting detective' in the stories written by Sir Doyle. Holmes is known for his skills of observation, knowledge of forensic science, and logical reasoning. He employs all these while investigating cases for a wide variety of clients. Sir Doyle's four novels and 56 short stories, excluding one, are set in the Victorian or Edwardian eras, between about 1880 and 1914.

Most are narrated by Dr. Watson, Holmes' friend. He is also his biographer who usually accompanies Holmes during his investigations and often shares quarters with him at the address of 221B, Baker Street, London, where many of the stories begin.

Sherlock Holmes is arguably the best known fictional detective, with Guinness World Records listing him as the 'most portrayed movie character' in history. The stories have been adapted into stage and radio plays, television films, video games and other media for over one hundred years.

Many have believed Holmes to be not a fictional character but a real individual because of his popularity and fame. Widely considered a British cultural icon, the character and stories had a profound and lasting effect on mystery writing and popular culture as a whole.
