Subject : Regarding Problems faced by Women

I am an avid reader of your newspaper and through its esteemed columns, I wish to express my agony at the problems faced women on a regular basis. On one side, people talk about women rights and the importance of empowering them, whereas on the other the rate of crime against women is increasing day by day. The contradiction is truly disturbing.

Even today, women cannot walk around freely in their own country. Firstly, they feel unsafe to walk on the roads at night, as the crime against women is on the rise. Secondly, women are still financially dependent on their male counterparts, and do not have financial independence. Thirdly, there is a lack of educational opportunities for females, and they get fewer work opportunities even when they are equally skilled and talented as men. In addition, many women also fall prey to domestic violence.

This problem cannot be tackled in a haphazard manner. Women should be treated as equals to men, not as their inferiors. Equal opportunities must be provided to males and females for education as well as employment. Schemes such as 'Beti Bachao Beti Padhao' must be properly implemented. Moreover, women need to be legal rights as well as financial independence. Apart from that women must be encouraged to exercise their rights. Boys and girls must be taught to respect each other from a young age.

I request you to kindly publish an article on this issue in newspaper, to draw the attention of the concerned authorities and spread awareness among the public. Only when women are as equals to men, India will be called a free country in the true sense.

Thank you

Yours sincerely

Help the Elderly

- by Radhika Khanna

All parents care for their children when they are young. However, when their parents grow old, what do their children do? They send 'old age homes', to escape from their duties and responsibilities. Is it an ethical decision? The elderly people are an asset to the nation. They have gained experiences throughout their lives, and their <sup>learning</sup> ~~tearings~~ positively impact the newer generations.

In this era, senior citizens face many problems. In later stages of their lives, apart from their physical health, their emotional and mental health is also impacted. Firstly, they face many health issues. Problems such as hypertension, back ache and joint pain become common in old-age. Secondly, they feel socially isolated. Most of them do not have any one to talk to, as either they live alone, or their children and grandchildren are too busy to spend time with them. They feel lonely, which negatively impacts their well-being. Lastly, they ~~feel~~ financially dependent on others, are unable to enjoy <sup>and</sup> ~~active~~ live their lives to the ~~fullest~~.

The society and the government can play a major role in ~~im~~ the elderly. Financial support must be provided to the senior citizens who require it. Furthermore, efforts must be made to ~~them~~ with timely medical support. They must be encouraged to ~~an~~ active life, and ~~centres~~ must be opened for the elderly where they can exercise, stay fit as well as socialise. Moreover, children must ~~to~~ be taught to respect and care for the elders.

In conclusion, the senior citizens of any country ~~are~~ ~~an~~ must be viewed as assets, not as liabilities. There is so much to be ~~from~~ them, and their experiences, struggles and advice prove to be highly useful for the coming generations. The elderly must be respected and cared for. The time to think has long ~~it is~~ time to act. Now!

10. a) The writer, Anees Jung, described Seemapuri as a place on the outskirts of Delhi, but miles away from it, metaphorically. She describes the people of Seemapuri lived in houses made of mud, and some made of tin or tarpaulin. These were temporary houses, and the entire place was devoid of sewage or drainage systems. Hence this description creates a dismal picture as it shows the stark and unhygienic conditions in which the people of Seemapuri lived.

b) The peddler had stolen thirty kroners from the crofter and somehow escaped. However, he felt that if he went to the ironmaster's house with him, his true identity would be revealed and he might get caught. The peddler felt guilty and afraid as he had stolen money, and <sup>had</sup> accepted the bait that the world offered him. Hence, he was hesitant to accompany the ironmaster as he was scared of getting caught and he knew that the ironmaster would recognise his fake act if he went with him.

1) In the poem 'A Thing of Beauty', John Keats talks about the grandeur of the mighty dead. For him, the tales and stories of our ancestors are beautiful, as they inspire people and encourage them to stay brave. These tales are grand and majestic, and are like an immortal drink from heaven. Their beauty is endless, as they provide joy to people.

1) M. Hamel was dressed in formal clothes: the clothes he wore on inspection or prize days. He was wearing his green coat, a white shirt and a black silk cap as it was his last day in the school in which he had taught for forty years. He was wearing formal clothes in honour of the last French lesson. It was of showing his respect towards the French language and his

10) Sophie's brother, Geoff, was the only one in the entire house listened to Sophie's tales. Sophie trusted Geoff and used to c in him. However, he was very silent and used to stay in a of his own, as he never spoke much. Sophie was jealous of h silence, and wanted to be admitted into his world. Hence, sh longed for her brother's affection as she enjoyed sharing her with him, and also wanted to know more about his world.

11. a) The Maharaja had banned the killing of tigers in his kingdom b anyone except him. Once, he stood at the risk of losing his ki when he disallowed a British officer from hunting tigers in his kingdom, Pratibandhapuram. Hence, to pacify the British office and please his wife, he tried to bribe the officer by sending sample of fifty diamond rings to the officer's wife. He had espec that the lady would select a couple of rings and return the. However, being greedy, she kept all fifty rings and the Maharaja forced to pay a bill of three lakh rupees to the British jewellers.

2) Derry entered Mr. Lamb's garden as he had thought that it was empty. However, as soon as he entered the garden, he heard a voice, "Mind the apples!". He got startled as he had expected the house to be empty. He did not like being around people, as he thought that they were afraid of him. Moreover, he did not want to be known across as a thief, as he had not come to steal the apples. He got startled when he realised that the house was empty, and that someone was already there.

3) Edla was completely different from her father, the ironmaster. The ironmaster was a proud man whose main aim was to produce out good quality iron. He had previously been a part of the...

He was not a very kind man, and when he mistook the peddler for his old regimental comrade, he invited him to his house solely of his pride. As soon as he got to know about the rattrap peddler's identity, he threatened to call the sheriff. On the other hand, Edla was kind and compassionate. ~~She~~ When the peddler refused the ironmaster's request to come to his manor, Edla was able to convince the peddler through her polite and loving manners. Even when she got to know of the peddler's true identity, she did not want to send him away as they had already promised Christmas cheer to him. Edla was a kind soul.

On Christmas morning, when the ironmaster and his daughter Edla came to know that the peddler was a thief, they got worried for different reasons. While the ironmaster doubted the peddler and was worried about his silverware, Edla was unhappy as she thought that the peddler had betrayed her trust. However, they soon realised that the peddler had not stolen anything and had also returned the Crofter's money. Moreover, Edla was observant and knew from the beginning that her father was the peddler to be his comrade, whereas the ironmaster was ignorant and did not pay attention to details. Thus, Edla was a contrast to her father, and had a heart of gold. It was her compassion and kindness which transformed the life of the peddler.

b) Bama and Zittkala-Sa were victims of discrimination. They were discriminated against on the basis of their caste and nationality very early in life. They were victims of a system that crushes aspirations. Bama had been treated poorly as she belonged to a lower caste, and was treated as an 'untouchable'. Similarly, Zittkala-Sa was also mistreated in her Indian Christian School. Her hair was forcefully shingled, and she had no rights of her own. She had faced humiliation after being separated from her mother. Thus, both, Bama and Zittkala-Sa were victims of discrimination. However, both of them were determined to break out and did not accept their fate. Bama studied hard, and came first in class.

helped her gain respect and make friends. ~~time~~ Likewise, Zit also rebelled against the cutting of her long hair. She did not consent so easily, and tried to break free. Hence, both, Boma and Zitkala-Sa were highly determined and resolute. They did not let difficult situations take over their lives. They fought for their rights and became successful writers. They prove that if one is determined and has the will to succeed, he/she can succeed in spite of difficulties and circumstances.
